Notable Figures In History

For the next few weeks we're going to focus on individuals who have been very successful within the African-American community.

One of these notable influencers is Madame CJ Walker. She was the first African-American self made female millionaires in the United States. She was born in Louisiana as Sarah Breedlove and was an orphan at age 6. At age 20 she was a widow with a two-year-old daughter. However, she attended night school and worked as a washer woman to support her family. She would also invest the little money she had left, to experiment on products to address her alopecia. This condition often caused her hair to fall out in clumps.

She was disappointed with the treatment products for her condition, and mixed oils until she discovered a special formula.

Her product worked, and she began to sell it door to door and then nationally. She also developed a straightening comb, "hot comb" and patented the model in 1906.

In 1908 Walker had developed hair courses for colleges and universities nationwide. By 1917, she had developed the Madame Walker Theatre center in Indianapolis and employed more than 3000 people in her manufacturing plant.

Madam Walker has set a great legacy for us to follow. She creatively invested time, money and effort to address the needs of a nation while struggling with an illness.
