Notable Figures In History

My sister called to share her astonishment. She is a teacher in a gifted program for Memphis, a city that boast one of the largest populations of African Americans in the United States. She started intentionally teaching black history, in an effort to expose these intelligent students to their heritage. These 3rd to 5th graders were exceptional in many subjects, but were ignorant about notable people of the civil rights movement. The only thing they recalled about Martin Luther King Jr. is that "he had a dream and a speech."

They were unaware of the sacrifice for freedom today. One of the great figures of this country is Dr. King. He was a preacher, teacher, and activist for equality and justice. His dream called for diversity and unity. He desired opportunity for all people regardless of skin color and nationality. He dreamt of a day when racism, segregation, misogyny, bigotry and male chauvinism would be obliterated.

Dr. King was assassinated on April 4, 1968 in Memphis, Tennessee. These children are surrounded with monuments and museums that highlight the fight for change. Yet they are clueless about history.

Today we celebrate black history with the anticipation of his dream being one day realized. We reflect on individuals whose voice for justice still resound, and their persistence for equality can still motivate.
